Bill No. 20

Audit Bill

2007

THE AUDIT BILL, 2007.

MEMORANDUM.

1. Policy and Principles

The policy behind this Bill is to give the Office of the Auditor General a meaningful degree of autonomy in the process of recruiting, promoting and disciplining its own staff, and generally in human resource development as well as in the management of its own budgetary process. A major principle of the Bill is for the Auditor General to have independent powers to appoint and pay staff, subject only to budgetary approval by the legislature.

2. Defects in the Existing Law

At present, employees of the Office of the Auditor General are public officers who are appointed, promoted and disciplined by the Public Service Commission. As such, the Office of the Auditor General is not organisationally and operationally independent and is not able to recruit or retain the calibre of staff it requires. The Office of the Auditor General is also unable to perform effectively owing to financial/budgetary constraints it suffers due to the lack of financial autonomy.

3. Remedies Proposed to deal with Defects in the Existing Law

Under Article 163 of the Constitution as amended by section 33 of the Constitution (Amendment) Act, 2005, the Auditor General is empowered, in consultation with the Public Service Commission, to employ and discipline his or her own staff.

As a result of the amendment, the autonomy sought to be achieved by the Office of the Auditor General in terms of recruiting, promoting and disciplining staff, and generally in human resource development can now be achieved by giving effect to article 163 of the Constitution, thereby conforming with the Constitution.

The proposals of the Bill are in line with the criteria of internationally accepted state audit institutions in terms of appointment, remuneration of the Auditor General and staff of the Office of the Auditor General, budgetary provisions, human resource developments, and rights of access to information, classified expenditure and the establishment of the Audit Board.

4.1 Object of the Bill

The object of the Bill is—

- (a) to give effect to articles 154(3) and 163 of the Constitution by providing for the Office of the Auditor General;
- (b) to provide for the appointment, tenure and removal of the Auditor General from office;
- (c) to provide for the staff of the Office of the Auditor General;
- (d) to provide for the auditing of accounts of central government, local government councils and administrative units, public organisations, private organisations and bodies;
- (e) to establish an Audit Board to perform specified functions relating to the Office of the Auditor General;
- (f) to empower and give the Auditor General a right of access to documents and information relevant to the performance of his or her functions; and
- (g) for other related matters.

4.2. Part I of the Bill incorporating clauses 1 and 2 provides for preliminary matters relating to commencement and the interpretation of words and phrases used in the Bill.

4.3. Part II of the Bill in clauses 3 to 12, deals with, among other things, the continuance in existence of the Office of the Auditor General, the appointment of the Auditor General in accordance with article 163(1) of the Constitution, tenure of office of the Auditor General and the remuneration of the Auditor General, oath of the Auditor General and removal from office of the Auditor General in accordance with article 163 (10) of the Constitution.

4.4. Part II further provides for situations where the Auditor General is absent from office, allows the Auditor General to appoint his or her own staff, provides for the oath of member of staff of the Office of the Auditor General and for an accounting officer to be designated by the Secretary to the Treasury on the recommendation of the Auditor General. It also confers on the Auditor General power to designate a member of staff of the Office of the Auditor General to act as Secretary to the Audit Board.

4.5. Part III of the Bill consisting of clauses 13 to 28, provides for the requirement for the Auditor General to authorise all withdrawals from the Consolidated Fund, gives the Auditor General independence to perform his or her functions without direction or control by any person or authority except as provided by the Constitution, provides for the functions of the Auditor General to audit the accounts of the central government, local government councils and administrative units, public organisations, private organisations and bodies, and requires the Auditor General to report on those accounts to Parliament.

4.6. Part III also requires the Auditor General to certify, in respect of each account, the result of the examination and to prepare a report on the examination and audit of accounts and submit the report to Parliament. It gives the Auditor General power to carry out value for money audits for purposes of establishing the economy, efficiency and effectiveness of the operations of any department or ministry in respect of which appropriation or other accounts are required to be prepared under the Public Finance and Accountability Act, 2003.

4.7. Part III further gives the Auditor General power to carry out random value for money audits under article 163(3)(b) of the Constitution; to carry out special audits and investigations considered necessary by him or her, and to engage private auditors. The Bill seeks to empower the Auditor General to have a right of access to all relevant papers and information and to obtain whatever explanations are considered necessary for the proper discharge of his or her duties. This is to ensure that the Auditor General's reports are accurate, thorough, fair and balanced.

4.8. The Bill allows the Auditor General to recommend to Parliament that any person be surcharged where there has been a deficiency in respect of money or stores subject to audit and to make general recommendations to the Minister for the purpose of minimising the unproductive expenditure of public monies and maximising the collection of public revenues. It permits the Auditor General to delegate his or her functions with the exception of the certification of accounts and the submission of reports to Parliament.

4.9. The Audit Bill in Part IV, in clauses 29 to 32 seeks to establish an Audit Board to recommend to Parliament an Auditor to audit the accounts of the Office of the Auditor General; review and make recommendations to Parliament on strategic plans of the Office of the Auditor General including expenditure plans proposed by the Auditor General; to consider and approve the annual budget estimates of the Office of the Auditor General for submission to Parliament and to approve the organisational structure and staff regulations for the Office of the Auditor General. It provides also for the tenure of office of members of the Board, resignation, death or removal of a member of the Board, and for meetings of the Board.

4.10. Part V of the Bill incorporating clauses 33 to 42 provides for the finances and expenses of the Office of the Auditor General which shall include funds approved by Parliament, fees received by the Office of the Auditor General, grants and donations as may be approved by the Minister and money from raising loans. It requires Parliament to approve all monies to defray the expenses of the Office of the Auditor General and gives the Auditor General power to levy fees for auditing the accounts of any body or organisation, which does not receive money from the Consolidated Fund.

4.11. Part V also requires the Auditor General to open and maintain bank accounts and to keep proper books of accounts. It gives him or her power to borrow money from any source, with the approval of the Minister, for meeting the obligations of the Office of the Auditor General. It allows the Auditor General to invest any funds that are not immediately required by the Office of the Auditor General and requires the Auditor General to prepare and submit to the President estimates of each financial year.

4.12. Part V further provides for the financial year of the Office of the Auditor General and requires the accounts of the Office of the Auditor General to be audited and reported upon in each financial year by an auditor appointed by Parliament on the recommendation of the Auditor General.

4.13. Part VI of the Bill creates offences including obstruction of the Auditor General or any person authorised by the Auditor General in the performance of his or her functions, refusal or failure to give the Auditor General or any person authorised by him or her, any books, records, returns or any papers, documents, records or information without any lawful justification. Giving the Auditor General a false or fabricated document or making false statements with intent to deceive or mislead the Auditor General or any person authorised by the Auditor General is also an offence.

4.14. Part VI further provides for offences committed by a person working in the Office of the Auditor General who misuses any information obtained by him or her when auditing any account under the Act. It also provides for offences committed by persons working in of the Office of the Auditor General who collude with accounting officers, internal auditors or other public officers in the conduct of their duties to omit or commit any act where such omission or commission leads to loss of public funds.

4.15. Part VII of the Bill incorporating clauses 44 to 49, deals with miscellaneous provisions relating to protection from liability of the Auditor General and the staff of Office of the Auditor General for acts done in good faith. It also provides for the appointment of consultants by the Auditor General, service of documents, making of regulations by the Board to give effect to the provisions of the Act, amendment of Schedules and for the supremacy of the Audit Act.

4.16. Part VIII of the Bill in clauses 50 to 52, provides for transitional provisions including the transfer of assets and liabilities vested in the Office of the Auditor General before the commencement of the Act. It continues in effect the employment of all persons immediately before the commencement of this Act employed by the Office of the Auditor General. It repeals Part IV (relating to preparation, audit and examination of accounts) and section 39 (relating to control of accounts of public organisations) of the Public Finance and Accountability Act, 2003.

5. Schedule 1 of the Bill gives the value of a currency point. Schedule 2 provides for the oath of the Auditor General and the oath of a member of staff of the Office of the Auditor General. Schedule 3 provides for meetings of the Board.
